IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF UTAH

THOMAS E. PEREZ, SECRETARY OF LABOR, UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, PLAINTIFF, v. PARAGON CONTRACTORS CORP. and BRIAN JESSOP, individually DEFENDANTS.	Civil Action No. 2:06-cv-00700 TC PLAINTIFF'S PROPOSED MEMORANDUM DECISION INCLUDING FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

On June 1, 2016, the Court found Defendants in contempt of a 2007 Permanent Injunction prohibiting future violations of the FLSA's child labor provisions. See Doc. 99. Just over a year later, Plaintiff filed another show cause motion arguing that Defendant Paragon Contractors Corporation ("Paragon") simply changed its name to Par 2 Contractors, LLC ("Par 2"), and promptly resumed using child labor. Plaintiff alleges that Par 2, as a successor in interest to Paragon, is bound by the 2007 injunction. Defendants deny that Par 2 is a successor to Paragon.

The Court held an evidentiary hearing on February 26-27, 2018. Plaintiff was represented by Karen E. Bobela, attorney for the United States Department of Labor. Defendants were represented by Rick Sutherland. Par 2, an intervening party, was represented by Jeffrey Matura. The Court heard testimony of witnesses, received into evidence several exhibits and joint stipulations by the parties, and has considered the parties' written arguments. After considering all of the evidence, the Court finds that Par 2, as a successor to Paragon and Brian Jessop, individually, violated the permanent injunction entered by this Court on November 29, 2007.

FINDINGS OF FACT^{1, 2}

1. The Court entered a Permanent Injunction against Defendants Paragon, Brian Jessop, and James Jessop on November 29, 2007.³ Pursuant to the injunction:

Defendants shall not, contrary to Sections 12(c) and 15(a)(4) of the FLSA, employ, suffer or permit minors to work in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, or in an enterprise engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce, within the meaning of the FLSA under conditions constituting oppressive child labor as defined in § 3(l) of the FLSA, 29 U.S.C. § 203(l), and in occupations therein declared to be hazardous as defined in the regulations found at 29 C.F.R. Part 570 (Subparts C and E).

2. The Injunction enjoins and restrains “defendants, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice of [the injunction].”⁴

3. On June 1, 2016, following an evidentiary hearing, the Court found Defendants

References to witness declarations and exhibits attached thereto submitted in advance of trial are cited by their ECF Document Number, page number, and paragraph number where applicable, i.e. “Doc. Paragon and Brian Jessop in contempt of the 2007 injunction.⁵

4. The Court entered a Sanctions Order on December 6, 2016, finding:

Here, shortly after being caught using child labor in the construction industry and agreeing to the entry of the Injunction, Defendants secretly began profiting from child labor once again. Defendants sought to conceal their knowing and willful violation of the Injunction. They told employees to lie about the child labor and even developed signals and strategies for hiding child workers during inspections. They failed to maintain records of work performed on the Ranch, denied the Department access to the Ranch, refused to provide names of employees who worked at the Ranch, refused to respond to subpoenas, and made incredible denials of their involvement with the work at the Ranch.⁶

Additionally, the court found Defendants “not credible,” and their testimony “evasive and often . . . contradicted by other witnesses’ testimony.”⁷

5. The Court also determined that “Defendants have left the Court with no assurance that they are in compliance with its order or that they will, on their own accord, comply in the future.”⁸ As a remedy for Defendants’ contempt, the Court appointed a special master to monitor Defendants’ compliance with the Court’s injunction, and ordered Defendants to make an initial payment of $200,000 to the Department of Labor to place into an interest bearing account to serve as a fund to compensate children for their work.⁹

6. Plaintiff filed another show cause motion on September 25, 2017, alleging that Defendants and Par 2 Contractors, LLC, as successor in interest to Paragon, were again in contempt of the 2007 injunction, as well as the Order Appointing Special Master.¹⁰

7. Defendants appealed the Court’s Order to the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. In March 2018, the Tenth Circuit affirmed Judge Campbell's finding of contempt and the compensatory damages contempt sanction, but reversed the appointment of a special master.¹¹

8. In light of the Tenth Circuit's decision, the parties stipulated that the only issue currently before this Court is whether Defendants and Par 2, as a successor in interest to Paragon, violated the 2007 Permanent Injunction.¹²

Par 2 is a Successor in Interest to Paragon

There has been a substantial continuity in operations, work force, location, management, working conditions and methods of production between Paragon and Par 2.

9. Par 2 is a commercial framing company, as was Paragon.¹³

10. Par 2 filed Articles of Incorporation with the Utah Secretary of State on December 2, 2013, but it did not begin to operate as a business until August 2014.¹⁴

11. While Paragon remains an active company, it has no contracts for work, jobs, or employees.¹⁵ Paragon sold most of its tools and equipment over the last few years.¹⁶ At most, Paragon had "a job or two" that was "still going on" in 2016 somewhere in Louisiana, but Brian Jessop does not remember any details of the job.¹⁷ Paragon had no jobs or contracts for work in 2017.¹⁸

12. Brian Jessop testified that he has been downsizing Paragon's operations since 2011 for personal reasons, but his testimony is inconsistent with Paragon's tax records, that he read into the record, establishing that Paragon's gross receipts and sales were $5,619,108 in 2010, $6,683,579 in 2011, and $6,088,107 in 2012.¹⁹

13. Porter Brothers is a general contractor located in Gilbert, Arizona.²⁰ Porter Brothers hired Paragon as a subcontractor for various jobs between 2013 and 2015.²¹ In May 2015, Porter Brothers received a bid from the same individuals it worked with at Paragon, but under the company name Par 2 Contractors, LLC, and Porter Brothers has worked with Par 2 (and not Paragon) ever since.²²

14. Like Paragon, Par 2 does work for large commercial hotels like Hyatt and Marriott, universities, and other large scale commercial projects.²³

15. Par 2's annual dollar volume of business was $1,030,998 in 2014, $5,753,562 in 2015, and $8,022,510.87 (YTD at the time of Wage Hour's investigation) in 2016.²⁴

16. Paragon's address is 1065 W. Utah Avenue, Hildale, UT, 84784.²⁵ Par 2 shared the same address from the time it incorporated up until the summer of 2017.²⁶

17. Paragon's phone number was (435) 874-1310.²⁷ Par 2 used the same phone number for several years.²⁸ Jake Barlow claimed that Par 2 eventually got a new phone number

c. In contrast, Brian Jessop testified that Don Jessop worked for Paragon between 2002 and 2004, but he acknowledged that Don Jessop appears on Paragon’s employee list provided to Wage Hour pursuant to a subpoena in 2012.⁴⁸

Jake Barlow:

23. Paragon and Par 2 use the same proposal forms to solicit work from contractors and Brian Jessop signed the proposals for both companies.⁷³ Paragon and Par 2 produced employee lists on nearly identical forms as well.⁷⁴ In an effort to explain this, Don Jessop testified that he is not sure whether Par 2 inherited the same software used by Paragon or purchased something different, despite the fact that he makes all decisions on behalf of Par 2.⁷⁵

Par 2 received some tools, equipment, and vehicles from Paragon; but neither Don nor Brian Jessop would elaborate with respect to what tools, equipment, or vehicles were transferred from Paragon to Par 2. For example, Don Jessop declared that "Par 2 Contractors did not receive all of its tools, equipment, or vehicles from Paragon."⁷⁷ Brian Jessop declared "neither Don Jessop nor Par 2 purchased any equipment or tools from me or Paragon."⁷⁸ At the hearing, Brian Jessop testified that some of Paragon's equipment and tools "could have" ended up in the hands of Par 2, but he could not think of anything specifically; despite having sold all of Paragon's tools and equipment himself.⁷⁹ He also is "not real sure" if Paragon is lending any

At least one contractor (Porter Brothers) that did business with Paragon for several years believed that Paragon changed its name to Par 2 in 2015.⁸³ Porter Brothers emailed Brian Jessop on May 1, 2015, asking for a new W-9 because Paragon’s company name changed.⁸⁴ Jake Barlow responded the same day, copying Brian Jessop, with a W-9 for Par 2 attached.⁸⁵ Jake Barlow’s signature line included Paragon’s company name and phone number.⁸⁶ Porter Brothers also continued to refer to the company as Paragon on job sites even after the name change to Par 2.⁸⁷ Other contractors continued to use email addresses associated with Paragon (pcctrades@gmail.com) for Par 2 business.⁸⁸

35. WHI Goehl found Par 2's foreman, Phil Barlow, to be "cagey" throughout the investigation.¹⁰⁴ WHI Goehl held an initial conference and conducted nearly eight hours of surveillance of the job site, where he observed Par 2's employees engaging in rough framing activities and utilizing power nail guns on or about the roof.¹⁰⁵

36. Based on records produced by Par 2, WHI Goehl discovered that two of the framers working on the site were 17 years old.¹⁰⁶ He confirmed with Jake Barlow and Par 2's attorney that all of the framers, including the 17-year olds, used power nail guns and worked on the roof.¹⁰⁷ Jake Barlow and Par 2's attorney did not provide any information that was contrary to WHI Goehl's findings or disagree with his conclusions.¹⁰⁸

37. WHI Goehl determined that Par 2's employment of these minors violated the child labor provisions of Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. § 212), and related regulations, including Hazardous Order 5 (29 C.F.R. § 570.55, occupations involved in the operation of power-driven wood-working machines) and Hazardous Order 16 (29 C.F.R. § 570.67, occupations in roofing operations and on or about a roof).¹⁰⁹ These regulations prohibit the employment of minors under the age of 18 from working in such occupations.¹¹⁰

38. During the closing conference, Par 2's attorney told WHI Goehl that Par 2, being from an extremely rural area in Hildale, UT, likely became accustomed to allowing 17-year olds to perform these types of tasks and was unaware that any rules existed to indicate that it was illegal.¹¹¹

39. Wage Hour assessed a civil money penalty in the amount of $6,920.00; Par 2 accepted the violations, paid the penalty, and the case was administratively closed.¹¹² Because Par 2 paid the penalty and did not contest the violations, Wage Hour's administrative

Defendants' witnesses are not credible

Brian Jessop

40. U.S. District Court Magistrate Judge Furse, U.S. District Court Judge Shelby, and U.S. District Court Judge Campbell have all determined that Brian Jessop is not credible. In the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law following the first contempt proceeding against Defendants in this action, Judge Campbell “found Brian Jessop not credible.”¹¹⁴ She noted:

This court is not the first judge in this case to find Brian Jessop not to be a credible witness. During proceedings brought by the Secretary to enforce subpoenas issued to Paragon and Brian Jessop, Magistrate Judge Evelyn Furse wrote: “Mr. Jessop’s claimed lack of knowledge [was] disingenuous.” Harris v. Paragon Contractors Corp., No. 2:13-cv-00281, slip op. at 2 (D. Utah June 20, 2013) (decision and recommendation to enforce subpoenas). Judge Furse found “Brian Jessop’s claim not to know a single person who harvested ground nuts at SUPR lack[ed] believability.” Id. at 3. She also found that Mr. Jessop’s denial of knowing who the FLDS Bishop was for two months made it clear that “Mr. Jessop simply did not want to provide that information.” Id. When reviewing Judge Furse’s conclusions for correctness, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Shelby made “the same findings.” Harris v. Paragon Contractors Corp., No. 2:13-cv-00281, slip op. at 3 (D. Utah Aug. 21, 2013) (order adopting Judge Furse’s decision and recommendation to enforce subpoenas). Judge Shelby said, “It is simply not credible that Mr. Jessop is unable to name a single person who harvested the ground nuts when the harvest resulted in Mr. Jessop and Paragon’s financial gain.” Id.

41. Brian Jessop continued to lack credibility in this case with respect to the Order Appointing Special Master.

a. After denying Defendants’ motion for reconsideration and motion to stay, the Court entered an Order Appointing Special Master on April 12, 2017.¹¹⁵ (Defendants also filed a motion to stay pending appeal with the Tenth Circuit, which was denied.¹¹⁶) Though the Order Appointing Special Master was ultimately reversed (and the parties stipulated that the legal significance of the Tenth Circuit decision is to limit the issues in dispute in this case¹¹⁷), it was a valid court order for nearly one year between April 12, 2017, and March 13, 2018, the date of the Tenth Circuit opinion.

b. Paragon and Brian Jessop's failure to comply with the Order Appointing Special Master between its entry and the Tenth Circuit's reversal demonstrates their ongoing disregard for orders from this Court and their willingness to deceive the Government.¹¹⁸ The special master order imposed various reporting requirements on Defendants, and any successors in interest, including notifying the Special Master and Wage Hour regarding the location of work sites where Defendants perform work and the identity and dates of birth of all of workers on such work sites.¹¹⁹ Brian Jessop was also required to disclose the location of every work site where he was working in any capacity.¹²⁰

c. Brian Jessop did not comply with this order while it was in effect.¹²¹ The only report Wage Hour received from Paragon and Brian Jessop after the entry of the Order Appointing Special Master is an email dated May 2, 2017, wherein Brian Jessop stated that they were not working on any jobsites and had no employees or upcoming contracts.¹²² Brian Jessop also stated he was pursuing another job and would let Wage Hour know if he got hired.¹²³

d. Wage Hour learned from the Special Master that Brian Jessop allegedly began working for Desert Storm Transportation over the 2017 summer.¹²⁴ Wage Hour sent investigators to the company to inquire further.¹²⁵ The woman who opened the door confirmed that Desert Storm operates within the building.¹²⁶ She stated that she had never seen Brian Jessop on the premises – and she was visibly puzzled by the suggestion that there was any connection between Mr. Jessop and the company.¹²⁷ Wage Hour investigators then traveled to Desert Storm’s shop location. Id. When they arrived, a woman was waiting for them with the phone number for Rich Barlow, the owner of Desert Storm.¹²⁸ The investigators spoke with Rich Barlow who provided an employee list with duties.¹²⁹ Mr. Jessop’s name appeared on the list and his job duties were listed as cleaning trailers in the yard. Id.

e. According to Brian Jessop, he became employed by Desert Storm Transportation in July 2017.¹³⁰ After great difficulty explaining what he does for the company, Brian Jessop finally testified that he mostly works around the shop, cleaning up and doing yard maintenance, and “more recently” he has been helping transport boxes to various companies.¹³¹ This is contrary to what he reported to the special master in June 2017, when he claimed his

f. Brian Jessop did not report any of the work he did for Par 2 to Wage Hour or the Special Master, even though he continued to work as an estimator, safety coordinator, and supervisor for Par 2 and was heavily involved in day to day operations of the company.¹³³ He continued to visit Par 2’s job sites as recently as the early months of 2018 (though he claims he was there “mostly just to say hi to the guys”).¹³⁴

g. Brian Jessop visited another Par 2 construction site in Rexburg, Idaho, where Par 2 was working on a student housing project.¹³⁵ While there, he tried to solicit a bid for a cleaning job from Headwaters Construction on behalf of his daughter’s cleaning company, which he has done on several occasions.¹³⁶ This work also was not reported to Wage Hour or the special master.¹³⁷

42. Brian Jessop’s emails from his Par 2 email account also undermine his credibility:

a. According to Brian Jessop he “helped” Par 2 since the company was formed.¹³⁸ In addition to what is set forth above, Brian Jessop’s assistance included communicating with estimators and contractors and reviewing contracts to ensure they are consistent with the estimate.¹³⁹ Brian Jessop estimated that he spent approximately two to three hours a night each week on these tasks, or maybe 20 hours a month (and sometimes more), between 2014 to the present.¹⁴⁰ Brian Jessop characterizes his involvement with Par 2's for-profit corporation between 2014 to the present as volunteer work.¹⁴¹

b. To do this work, Don Jessop authorized Brian Jessop to open an email account (par2brian@speedmail.us) to communicate with contractors on behalf of Par 2.¹⁴² The Department of Labor issued a subpoena to Brian Jessop on September 8, 2017, requesting all electronic correspondence sent to or from par2brian@speedmail.us between August 15, 2014 and the present.¹⁴³ Brian Jessop produced only 16 emails in response to the subpoena, all of which were junk mail.¹⁴⁴ He produced no emails from his sent, deleted, or any other folders and he claimed that is because he keeps his email "cleaned out" (with the apparent exception of junk mail).¹⁴⁵

c. Wage Hour also issued a subpoena to Par 2 requesting all electronic correspondence sent to or from par2brian@speedmail.us between August 15, 2014 and the present.¹⁴⁶ Though he confirmed that he authorized Brian Jessop to open this email account on behalf of Par 2, Don Jessop refused to produce emails to or from that account in response to the subpoena on the basis that he did not control the server and he was unwilling to ask Brian Jessop to produce them voluntarily.¹⁴⁷

d. Plaintiff obtained numerous emails from an independent source reflecting Brian Jessop's material involvement in Par 2's day to day business operations.¹⁴⁸ Most of the emails were sent during regular business hours, not in the evenings as Brian Jessop claimed, and the content of the emails is not limited to project estimates or contracts.¹⁴⁹ Rather, the content of the emails reflect Brian Jessop's active involvement in Par 2's construction sites – long after Par 2 obtained the contract for work – and they deal with specific items related to the erection of columns, windows that need to be hung, screen walls that need to be framed, anchor bolt problems, and punch list items that need to be done after completion of a project.¹⁵⁰ Brian Jessop conceded that he sent “many” similar emails like the ones in Exhibits 7-11.¹⁵¹ All of these emails were sent after the entry of the Order Appointing Special Master.^{152, 153}

43. As of the date of the hearing, Brian Jessop had paid $162,000 to the Department of Labor in accordance with Judge Campbell's sanctions order, despite his claim that he had been unemployed up until July 2017.¹⁵⁴ He explained that the money came from family and friends “as though [he] borrowed it from them.”¹⁵⁵

44. The nature and extent of Brian Jessop's involvement with Par 2 was reinforced by what Wage Hour discovered when it attempted to serve a subpoena to Par 2.¹⁵⁶ After discovering that Par 2 was located in the same business complex as Paragon, the Wage Hour investigator rang the buzzer located outside the building and spoke to a woman who said everyone from Par 2

was out for lunch, but she would try to get a hold of her “boss.”¹⁵⁷ The investigator asked if the person she was trying to get a hold of was Brian Jessop and she said yes and confirmed that Brian Jessop works for Par 2.¹⁵⁸ The woman refused to provide her name or any additional information.¹⁵⁹

Don Jessop

45. Though he claims to be 100% owner and responsible for all decisions regarding Par 2, Don Jessop was unfamiliar with several aspects of the company during his August 2017 initial conference with Wage Hour, including: Par 2’s annual dollar volume of business; its Employer Identification Number; how business records are kept by the company; when the workweek began; how employees are paid for travel time, overtime, or per diem; whether employees receive sick leave; and whether Par 2 provides lodging for employees.¹⁶⁰ Similarly, although Don Jessop claimed to do the hiring and firing and set rates of pay for Par 2 employees, he was not sure how many salaried employees he had (he could only guess himself, Jake Barlow, and Benjamin Barlow) and he did not know what Jake or Benjamin Barlow’s salaries were.¹⁶¹

46. When Wage Hour asked if Par 2 employs any former Paragon employees, Don Jessop stated he hired “two or three employees from Paragon.”¹⁶² This is inconsistent with the employee lists produced by Paragon and Par 2 pursuant to subpoenas, which reflect an overlap of approximately 19-21 employees that used to work for Paragon who now work for Par 2.¹⁶³

47. During the initial conference with Wage Hour in August 2017, Don Jessop attempted to minimize the nature and extent of Brian Jessop's involvement with Par 2.¹⁶⁴ He claimed that Brian Jessop sometimes provides assistance in the evenings by ensuring bids are in the appropriate range.¹⁶⁵ He described bidding and estimating as a "hobby" for Brian to explain why Brian is happy to do this work for free as a favor for his brother.¹⁶⁶ Towards the end of the initial conference, Don stated that Brian had been involved more than usual recently, as Par 2 had been really busy and he had to lean on him more as a result; and he confirmed that Brian handles most of the bids/proposals for Par 2 and communicates regularly with contractors on behalf of Par 2.¹⁶⁷ Despite these facts, Don Jessop denies that Brian Jessop has ever been employed by or received wages from Par 2.¹⁶⁸

48. A side-by-side comparison of the records produced by Porter Brothers¹⁶⁹ and those produced by Par 2¹⁷⁰ demonstrates that Par 2 removed Brian Jessop's name from the contract documents in several locations. In the contracts produced by Porter Brothers, "Respectfully, Brian Jessop" appears at the bottom of each work proposal.¹⁷¹ In the identical contracts produced by Par 2 to Wage Hour pursuant to a subpoena, "Respectfully, Brian Jessop" has been erased from the document.¹⁷² Similarly, in at least one location the contract price is crossed out and re-written with a box that says "per phone call with Brian Jessop 5/21/15."¹⁷³ In the identical proposal produced by Par 2, the text box has been altered to read "per phone call

49. Par 2 provided numerous OSHA forms bearing Paragon’s name to ADOSH, on two separate occasions over a year apart.¹⁷⁷ Jake Barlow claims that Benjamin Barlow accidentally sent the Paragon OSHA forms to Inspector Wilson in September 2015;¹⁷⁸ and that he accidentally sent the Paragon OSHA forms to Inspector Brooks in November 2016.¹⁷⁹ His explanation for both “mistakes” is that he kept these forms from his employment at Paragon and he intended to use them as templates for Par 2.¹⁸⁰ This explanation lacks credibility. Especially considering that Don Jessop reviewed all of the documents sent to ADOSH before production was made.¹⁸¹ The earliest OSHA form for Par 2 was signed in 2016.¹⁸² Moreover, Jake Barlow conceded that the OSHA forms are fillable, writable PDF documents found directly on OSHA’s website where the “template” is pre-populated.¹⁸³

51. Jake Barlow also claims that Par 2 mistakenly produced Paragon’s safety and health policy to ADOSH.¹⁸⁶ According to him, he intended to use Paragon’s policy, but replace Paragon’s name with Par 2 within the document.¹⁸⁷

52. Jake Barlow made another “mistake” when he emailed Porter Brothers on May 1, 2015, from his Par 2 email account with “Paragon Contractors” in his signature line.¹⁸⁸ He explained that he copied Brian Jessop on this email “so that he knew that I had clarified for Carli Porter that Par 2 Contractors was providing the services on the Sedona Marriott project, not Paragon.”¹⁸⁹ But he made no such “clarification” in the email and this explanation does not address the fact that his signature line from his Par 2 email address bears Paragon’s name.¹⁹⁰ In response to an email from Porter Brothers stating “I noticed that you (sic) company name changed in the attachment. Can you please send over a new W-9 form?”, Jake Barlow simply responded “Carli see attached” and provided Par 2’s W-9 as requested.¹⁹¹

53. Jake Barlow denies having any knowledge of Brian Jessop’s involvement with Par 2, despite the fact that Brian Jessop is his uncle, and despite the nature and extent of Brian

Jessop's involvement at Par 2 by his own admission and other evidence in this case.¹⁹²

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

A. Par 2, as a successor to Paragon, qualifies as a “person[] in active concert or participation with them” capable of violation of the injunction.

The Supreme Court in Regal Knitwear Co. v. NLRB found that those denominated “successors and assigns” could be held liable for damages flowing from failure to abide by an injunction.¹⁹³ “Successors and assigns may. . . be instrumentalities through which defendant seeks to evade an order or may come within the description of persons in active concert or participation with them in the violation of an injunction. If they are, by that fact they are brought within [the] scope of contempt proceedings by the rules of civil procedure [Rule 65(d)].”¹⁹⁴ Likewise, the Supreme Court has held that injunctions to prevent violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C.A. § 201 et seq. (1985), may be enforced by contempt proceedings “against the corporation, its agents and officers and those individuals associated with it in the conduct of its business, [and] it may also, in appropriate circumstances, be enforced against those to whom the business may have been transferred, whether as a means of evading the judgment or for other reasons.”¹⁹⁵

The Walling decision was made in the context of facts strikingly similar to those here:

Whether a family business, such as this one appears to be, has successfully avoided all responsibility for compliance with the judgment entered against the family corporation, by the simple expedient of dissolving it and continuing the business under the individual control of members of the family, as appears to have taken place here, is a question which it is unnecessary for us to decide on the basis of the scanty and not entirely enlightening affidavits now submitted to us. It is enough for present purposes, if the appellate procedure, rendered abortive by respondent's dissolution, has not deprived petitioner of the benefits of the judgment rendered in his favor by the District Court, *that he is entitled to initiate proceedings to enforce the judgment against individuals who either disobey its command or participate in the evasion of its terms. In such proceedings the question as to how far the successor to the corporation is bound by the decree may be fully investigated by the District Court, with appropriate appellate review.*¹⁹⁶

- i. Par 2 is a successor to Paragon and was the instrumentality through which Defendants sought to evade the 2007 injunction.

The Court finds that Par 2 is a successor to Paragon and Paragon's business was transferred to Par 2 to evade the 2007 injunction and the related subpoena enforcement and contempt proceedings that followed in 2013 (and culminated in a finding of contempt and sanctions order). This finding is supported by sufficient evidence in the record that Brian Jessop and Don Jessop went to great lengths to conceal and minimize Don Jessop's level of involvement with Paragon before Par 2 was up and running;¹⁹⁷ and similarly, their attempt to conceal and minimize Brian Jessop and James Jessop's involvement in Par 2 after Paragon transferred its business operations to Par 2.¹⁹⁸ To further their deception, they produced altered documents to a federal agency pursuant to a subpoena to destroy evidence of Brian Jessop's role with Par 2.¹⁹⁹ As the Court characterized it after the hearing, it amounts to "falsification without justification."²⁰⁰ The deception also includes Brian Jessop's failure and Par 2's refusal to produce emails sent to or from Brian Jessop's Par 2 email account pursuant to a subpoena.²⁰¹ The emails obtained by the Plaintiff through an independent source unequivocally implicate Brian Jessop as an employee and agent of Par 2 and demonstrate his extensive involvement in Par 2's day to day business operations.²⁰² The only reason for Par 2 to alter these documents and withhold Brian Jessop's emails is to evade orders from this Court that bind Brian Jessop (and consequently impact Par 2).

The deception is also apparent from Defendants' failure to comply with the Order Appointing Special Master in this action.²⁰³ Though it was ultimately reversed by the Tenth Circuit, it was a valid Order of this Court between April 12, 2017, and March 13, 2018. During this time, there is no question that Brian Jessop was employed by and heavily involved with the operations at Par 2 as evidenced by several emails pertaining to various job sites with Headwaters Construction. Brian Jessop did not notify Wage Hour or the special master of his employment at Par 2. Instead, he claimed to be unemployed until July 2017, at which time he reported only to the Special Master that he was employed by Desert Storm Transportation. The inconsistencies regarding Brian Jessop's alleged employment at Desert Storm are significant and cause the Court to doubt whether Brian Jessop was ever employed by this company.²⁰⁴ The Court finds that Defendants' failure to comply with the Order Appointing Special Master until it was reversed by the Tenth Circuit demonstrates their ongoing flagrant disregard for orders from this Court.

More broadly, the Court finds that Don Jessop's and Brian Jessop's testimony was reluctant and replete with pauses, vague answers, and absence of recall that affects the Court's assessment of their credibility.²⁰⁵ Like the three federal judges who made adverse credibility findings against Brian Jessop in prior proceedings related to this case, the Court explicitly finds that Brian Jessop is not credible. Similarly, the Court finds that Don Jessop is also not credible.

Ultimately, the Court shares the impression of Porter Brothers that Paragon simply changed its name to Par 2 and continued business as usual. Brian Jessop is the owner of Paragon and his brother, James Jessop, served as the Vice President of the company. Par 2 is owned by their brother, Don Jessop, and Brian Jessop and James Jessop have continued working for Par 2. While Paragon is not formally dissolved, it ceased operations around the same time Par 2 began operations and Par 2 continued Paragon's business under the individual control of family members. Under Walling, the Court must now consider the extent to which Par 2, as successor to Paragon, was bound by the 2007 Injunction.

ii. Successor Liability

Successor liability under the FLSA has yet to be specifically addressed by the Tenth Circuit. However, in Chao v. Concrete Management Resources, LLC, the district court permitted the plaintiff to amend her complaint, in part, based on a theory of successor liability under the FLSA.²⁰⁶ The court found that while the Tenth Circuit had not addressed the issue, the only circuit court that had “held, with no difficulty whatsoever, that successorship liability exists under the FLSA.”²⁰⁷ Since then, the Third, Seventh and Eleventh Circuits have addressed the merits of the issue and concluded that application of the federal common law standard of successor liability to claims under the FLSA is the logical extension of existing case law.²⁰⁸

The Tenth Circuit has expressly adopted the “MacMillan factors” in analyzing the federal common law standard for a successor corporation’s liability in the Title VII context.²⁰⁹ Those factors include whether the successor company had notice of the charge; the ability of the predecessor to provide relief; and whether there has been a substantial continuity in operations, work force, location, management, working conditions and methods of production.²¹⁰ The “nature and extent of [successor] liability is subject to no formula, but must be determined upon the facts and circumstances of each case.”²¹¹ “The liability of a successor is not automatic, but must be determined on a case by case basis.”²¹²

Federal courts have developed a similar common-law doctrine of successorship liability in the labor and employment context which includes some or all of the “MacMillan factors.”²¹³ This common law doctrine extends to legal obligations arising under the National Labor Relations Act (“NLRA”), the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”), Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (“Title VII”), and the Family and Medical Leave Act (“FMLA”), among others.²¹⁴

Striking a “balance between the need to effectuate federal labor and employment ... policies and the need ... to facilitate the fluid transfer of corporate assets,” the successorship doctrine, when applicable, holds legally responsible for obligations arising under federal labor and employment statutes businesses that are substantial continuations of entities with such obligations. “The inquiry [in these successorship cases] is [therefore] not merely whether the new employer is a ‘successor’ in the strict corporate-law sense of the term. The successorship inquiry in the labor-law context is much broader.” Sullivan, 623 F.3d at 781. “The primary question in [labor and employment] successorship cases is whether, under the totality of the circumstances, there is ‘substantial continuity’ between the old and new enterprise.” (internal citations omitted)²¹⁵

“Decisions on successorship must balance, inter alia, the national policies underlying the statute at issue and the interests of the affected parties.”²¹⁶ Because the origins of successor liability are equitable, fairness is a prime consideration in its application.²¹⁷

The idea behind having a distinct federal standard applicable to federal labor and employment statutes is that these statutes are intended either to foster labor peace, as in the National Labor Relations Act, or to protect workers' rights, as in Title VII, and that in either type of case the imposition of successor liability will often be necessary to achieve the statutory goals because the workers will often be unable to head off a corporate sale by their employer aimed at extinguishing the employer's liability to them. This logic extends to suits to enforce the Fair Labor Standards Act. “The FLSA was passed to protect workers' standards of living through the regulation of working conditions. 29 U.S.C. § 202. That fundamental purpose is as fully deserving of protection as the labor peace, anti-discrimination, and worker security policies underlying the NLRA, Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 1981, ERISA, and MPPAA.” Steinbach v. Hubbard, 51 F.3d 843, 845 (9th Cir. 1995). In the absence of successor liability, a violator of the Act could escape liability, or at least make relief much more difficult to obtain, by selling its assets without an assumption of liabilities by the buyer (for such an assumption would reduce the purchase price by imposing a cost on the buyer) and then dissolving. And although it can be argued that imposing successor liability in such a case impedes

iii. Par 2 as a successor to Paragon can be held liable for contempt of the 2007 Injunction

Turning to the application of this test and taking into account fairness and the policies and interests at stake, the Court finds that Par 2 is a successor with liability to Paragon. There has been a substantial continuity in operations, work force, location, management, working conditions, and methods of production between Paragon and Par 2; Par 2 had notice of the 2007 injunction; and Par 2 has the ability to provide relief.

a. *Par 2 had substantial continuity in operations from Paragon*²¹⁸

In sum, Par 2 picked up where Paragon left off with its commercial framing company. Par 2 began operations when Paragon was slowing down operations. Dennis Porter, one of the owners of Porter Brothers, explained the impact of the transfer of business operations between Paragon and Par 2 succinctly: Porter Brothers hired Paragon as a subcontractor for various jobs between 2013-2015; in May 2015, Porter Brothers received a bid from the same individuals it worked with at Paragon, but under the company name Par 2 Contractors, LLC; and Porter Brothers has worked with Par 2 (and not Paragon) ever since. In light of Paragon's name change to Par 2, Porter Brothers requested a new W-9, which Jake Barlow provided from a Par 2 email address with Paragon Contractors in his signature line.

Par 2 continued to operate with Paragon's same address, phone number, email addresses in some instances, and several of the same form documents (i.e. employee list, proposals, etc.).

the operation of the market in companies by increasing the cost to the buyer of a company that may have violated the FLSA, it's not a strong argument. The successor will have been compensated for bearing the liabilities by paying less for the assets it's buying; it will have paid less because the net value of the assets will have been diminished by the associated liabilities.

711 F. 3d 763, 765-67 (7th Cir. 2013). This pronouncement is well reasoned and directly applicable to the facts in this case.

²¹⁸ See ¶¶ 9-27, supra

At least 19 of Paragon's employees transferred to Par 2 (some of whom continued to identify their employer as Paragon even after the name change occurred). In addition, Paragon's upper level management transferred to Par 2 as well and continued their same roles in the company, including Don Jessop, Brian Jessop, James Jessop, Jake Barlow, and Benjamin Jessop. Par 2 also inherited and utilized Paragon's Occupational Safety and Health Policy, as well as several OSHA forms bearing Paragon's name to establish compliance with OSHA's record keeping requirements. Par 2 inherited some tools, equipment, and vehicles from Paragon. These facts establish a substantial continuity in operations, work force, location, management, working conditions, and methods of production; Paragon and Par 2 are one and the same.

b. *Par 2 had notice of the 2007 Injunction*²¹⁹

Brian Jessop and James Jessop are individually named and their signatures appear on the 2007 Injunction. The Court finds that both of these individuals had actual knowledge of the Injunction before Paragon changed its name to Par 2. In fact, the name change occurred shortly after Paragon and Brian Jessop were subject to subpoena enforcement litigation that culminated in a finding of contempt against them for violating the Injunction at issue.²²⁰ Because Defendants used Par 2 as an instrumentality to violate the injunction, Brian and James Jessop's actual knowledge of the Injunction is imputed to Par 2.

The Court also finds that sufficient evidence supports a finding that Don Jessop and Jake Barlow also had actual notice of the Injunction. Don Jessop was a Director for Paragon's corporation from 2000-2010, during which time the Injunction was entered. He was also employed by Paragon over the course of ten years, and he facilitated the transfer of Paragon to ²¹⁹ See ¶¶ 28-32, supra.

Par 2 with his brothers who are individually named as parties to the Injunction. Though Don Jessop claims that he “has never seen, been given of, or read” the 2007 Permanent Injunction,²²¹ the Court does not find this testimony to be credible. Don Jessop’s willful ignorance of the Injunction does not negate a finding that he had actual knowledge of it.

Similarly, Jake Barlow was the primary point of contact at Paragon before the name change to Par 2. He testified that he assisted Paragon with gathering and producing documents pursuant to the Department of Labor’s subpoena issued to Paragon in 2013 in the course of Wage Hour’s child labor investigation. Underlying that subpoena and investigation was the 2007 Injunction and Jake Barlow understood the purpose of the subpoena and Wage Hour’s investigation. The Court finds it highly unlikely given his role in the company and his participation in the prior investigation that he had no knowledge of the Injunction.

The Court finds that the credibility issues involving Defendants’ witnesses, and the nature and extent of the deception involved in concealing the relationship between Paragon, Brian Jessop, James Jessop, and Par 2 are intertwined with and directly related to Defendants’ and Par 2’s attempt to evade the 2007 Injunction. As such, the Court finds that all parties involved in this action had actual knowledge of the Injunction.

c. *Par 2 has the ability to provide relief*²²²

Par 2’s annual dollar volume of business exceeded $8 million in 2016. Par 2 operates in several states and works with a variety of contractors. The Court finds that there was no evidence presented at trial to support a finding that Par 2 is unable to provide relief in this case. To the contrary, the Court finds that Par 2 does have the ability to provide relief.

Under the totality of circumstances in this case, the Court finds that there is substantial continuity between Paragon and Par 2 and that the name change of the entity from Paragon to Par 2 is the only real distinction to be made between the two companies. This finding is based on the national policies underlying the Fair Labor Standards Act and the interests of the affected parties with fairness being the prime consideration. Defendants and Par 2 cannot be permitted to avoid all responsibility for compliance with the 2007 Injunction entered against Paragon, Brian Jessop, and James Jessop, by the simple expedient of unofficially transferring Paragon's business operations to Par 2 under the individual control of the same family members.

As the instrumentality through which Defendants sought to evade the 2007 Injunction, Par 2 comes within the description of "persons in active concert or participation with them" in violation of the Injunction. Under this guise, and as a successor to Paragon, the Court finds that at all relevant times Par 2 was bound by the 2007 Injunction in this case.

B. Defendants and Par 2 are in Contempt of the 2007 Injunction

In order to prove contempt of a court order, a plaintiff must establish by clear and convincing evidence, that (1) a valid court order existed, (2) defendants had knowledge of the order, and (3) defendants disobeyed the order.²²³

i. A valid court order existed

The 2007 Permanent Injunction entered by this Court on November 29, 2007, is a valid court order. The injunction permanently enjoins Paragon, Brian Jessop, James Jessop and "their officers, agents, servants, employees, and those persons in active concert or participation with them" from violating the provisions of Sections 12(c) and 15(a)(4) of the FLSA.

ii. Defendants had knowledge of the court order.

²²³ Reliance Ins. Co. v. Mast. Constr. Co., 159 F.3d 1311, 1315 (10th Cir. 1998); see also F.T.C. v. Kuykendall, 371 F.3d 745, 756 (10th Cir. 2004).

For the reasons stated above, the Court finds that Defendants and Par 2, as an intervening party, had knowledge of the Injunction.

iii. Defendants and Par 2 disobeyed the order²²⁴

Plaintiff has shown by clear and convincing evidence that Defendants and Par 2 disobeyed the 2007 Injunction by suffering or permitting minors to work in violation of the FLSA, 29 U.S.C. § 212. Par 2 was the instrumentality through which Defendants employed minors as framers on a construction site where they used power nail guns and worked on a roof in violation of Hazardous Order 5 (29 C.F.R. § 570.55, occupations involved in the operation of power-driven wood-working machines) and Hazardous Order 16 (29 C.F.R. § 570.67, occupations in roofing operations and on or about a roof). Brian Jessop prepared the bid for the job where the child labor occurred, he was designated as the primary point of contact for Par 2 on the subcontract for work, and he maintained communication with the general contractor throughout the job.

As a result of the child labor violations, Wage Hour assessed a civil money penalty in the amount of $6,920.00. Par 2 accepted the violations, paid the penalty, and the case was administratively closed. By paying the penalty and not taking exception to the determination that the violations for which the penalty was imposed occurred, the administrative determination became a final order and not subject to administrative or judicial review.²²⁵

C. Conclusion

Less than two years ago, the Honorable Judge Campbell found Defendants Paragon and Brian Jessop in contempt of the 2007 injunction.²²⁶ The Sanctions Order begins with a finding that “[b]ehind a veil of secrecy in Southern Utah’s desert country the Defendants profited from the labor of a religious community’s children in violation of the court’s previous injunction.” Judge Campbell found “[a]t the hearing, as well as throughout discovery, it became clear that Paragon and Brian Jessop were not trustworthy and would go to great lengths to deceive the court and the Government.”²²⁷ This finding was based in part on the fact that “shortly after being caught using child labor in the construction industry and agreeing to the entry of the [2007] Injunction, Defendants secretly began profiting from child labor once again. Defendants sought to conceal their knowing and willful violation of the Injunction.”²²⁸

²²⁴ See ¶¶ 34-39, supra.

²²⁵ Doc. 150, p. 4; 29 C.F.R. Part 580.5.

Despite the finding of contempt and the imposition of sanctions on Defendants Paragon and Brian Jessop just two years ago, we again are faced with Defendants’ contempt of the Injunction and their extraordinary efforts to conceal their knowing and willful violation of it. Shortly after being caught profiting from the labor of a religious community’s children in violation of the 2007 Injunction, Defendants began profiting from child labor in the construction industry once again. The Court agrees with Judge Campbell’s finding that Paragon and Brian Jessop are not trustworthy, and the Court finds that they have gone to great lengths, in active concert and participation with Par 2 and Don Jessop and Jake Barlow, to deceive the Court and the Government by simply changing Paragon’s name to Par 2 to evade the Court’s orders.

The Court finds that Plaintiff has proven by clear and convincing evidence that Par 2 Contractors, LLC, is a successor in interest to Paragon Contractors Corporation. Plaintiff has also proven by clear and convincing evidence that Defendants and Par 2, and Don Jessop and Jake Barlow as agents of Par 2, are in contempt of the 2007 Injunction.

²²⁸ Doc. 109, p. 10.

For the foregoing reasons,

IT IS ORDERED that Par 2 Contractors, LLC, as a successor in interest to Paragon Contractors Corporation, is joined as a Defendant to this action.²²⁹

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED and ADJUDGED that Defendants Paragon, Brian Jessop, and Par 2, Don Jessop, as Par 2's agent, and Jake Barlow as Par 2's agent, are in civil contempt of this Court's 2007 Injunction (Doc. 26).

In order to purge themselves of such contempt, Defendants, its officers, agents, successors and assigns shall:

1. Provide a copy of the 2007 Injunction and this Order to every contractor, employer, or entity with whom it has entered into a contract to perform work over the last ten years. Defendants shall certify to Wage Hour that it has complied with this provision and provide a list of every contractor, employer, or entity to whom such notice was provided within 30 days of the entry of this Order.²³⁰

2. Provide a copy of the 2007 Injunction and this Order to each of their employees. Defendants shall certify to Wage Hour that it has complied with this provision and provide a list

²²⁹ Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(c), “[i]f an interest is transferred, the action may be continued by or against the original party unless the court, on motion, orders the transferee to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party.” A “transfer of interest” in a corporate context “occurs when one corporation becomes the successor to another by merger or other acquisition of the interest the original corporate party had in the lawsuit.” Dalzell v. Trailhead Lodge at Wildhorse Meadows, LLC, 2012 WL 3150565 (D. Colo., Aug. 2, 2012) (citing Luxliner P.L. Export Co. v. RDI/Luxliner, Inc., 13 F.3d 69, 71 (3d Cir.1993)). Substitution of a successor in interest or its joinder as an additional party under Rule 25(c) is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Prop-Jets, Inc. v. Chandler, 575 F.2d 1322, 1324 (10th Cir. 1978). Notably, “[t]he most significant feature of Rule 25(c) is that it does not require that anything be done after an interest has been transferred.” Dalzell, 2012 WL 3150565 at *1. “The action may be continued by or against the original party, and the judgment will be binding on the successor in interest even though the successor is not named.” Id. (citing *Capitol Packaging Corp. v. of every employee to whom such notice was provided within 30 days of this Order.²³¹

3. Defendants shall place $50,000 into a fund to provide training on the child labor provisions of the FLSA and its implementing regulations to all of Defendants' employees and management, including all employees under the age of 18.²³² This remedy is imposed in order to compensate those who have suffered most from Defendants' contemptuous conduct, namely, Defendants' under-aged employees, by providing a fuller understanding of the child labor provisions of the FLSA to under-aged workers, their adult co-workers, and their managers. In imposing this requirement, the Court credits testimony from WHI Goehl regarding his closing conference with Par 2 following Wage Hour's child labor investigation in 2016. During that conference Par 2's attorney told WHI Goehl that Par 2, being from an extremely rural area in Hildale, UT, likely became accustomed to allowing 17-year olds to perform these types of tasks and was unaware that any rules existed to indicate that it was illegal.²³³ This remedy squarely addresses this problem. Moreover, the training fund and associated training activities also serve to compensate the Plaintiff and the public for the harm caused by Defendants' contempt. Congress has deemed that it is in the public interest to eliminate detrimental labor conditions, including, most importantly, the use of illegal child labor. Defendants' continued exploitation of child labor for their own competitive advantage has harmed Plaintiff's ability to uphold that public interest.²³⁴ The parties shall confer regarding the implementation and operation of this training fund and submit a proposed plan to the Court within 30 days of this Order.

Defendants shall file any objections to the proposed order within 14 days thereafter. Defendants shall reimburse Plaintiff for the reasonable costs of prosecuting the contempt, including attorney's fees, within 30 days of an Order from the Court imposing such costs.

5. In the event that Defendants fail to comply with any provisions of this Order, including the deadlines set forth above, a prospective daily monetary penalty in the amount of $1,000 will be imposed until compliance is reached.²³⁶
